SecuriLOG

What is Securilog?

Securilog is a data logging device designed to replace the printer on decontamination machines such as ultrasonic cleaners, washer disinfectors and sterilisers.

The data that would normally print onto a hard copy receipt is instead logged onto a memory card and transferred to your computer for viewing. The data can still be printed out for archival purposes if needed.

Helping to protect you through data encryption

Securilog provides you with Data Encryption when writing to the memory card, preventing any modification of data. Many other data loggers store data in text files or other editable formats.

With Securilog you are safe in the knowledge that encrypted, tamper proof evidence is being gathered to protect you and your decontamination process should litigation arise due to cross infection.

Securilog indicates cycle results to your staff

A constant green LED indicates that the Securilog is initialised and ready to receive your process data.

An amber LED indicates that the Securilog is receiving your process data and recording it on the memory card.

A flashing green LED indicates that the previous cycle has passed and the Securilog is waiting for the next cycle to start.

A flashing red LED indicates that the previous cycle has failed and the Securilog is waiting for the next cycle to start.

Please note: Pass or Fail indication is only available if the decontamination machine itself is able to determine the cycle result and inform Securilog. The device is only able to record data that would have originally been printed on the paper receipt.

Easy archiving through Securilog software package

Securilog software can sort out the data, allow you to quickly analyse the digital receipts for specific information and present the data to an auditor on screen as it would have been printed out on a printer.
